

Contents

INTRODUCTION

- What can demographers contribute to the study of vulnerability? 1
Raya Muttarak, Wolfgang Lutz and Leiwen Jiang

Demographic Debate

Why are so few demographers working on population and climate change?

- Engagement of demographers in environmental issues from a historical perspective 15
Peter McDonald

- The next best time for demographers to contribute to climate change research 19
Anastasia J. Gage

- Will climate change shift demography's 'normal science'? 23
Lori M. Hunter and Jane Menken

- Barriers to involvement of Chinese demographers in climate change research 29
Xizhe Peng and Qin Zhu

- Population dynamics and climate change: A challenging frontier for the intrepid demographer 33
Adrian C. Hayes

- Two statements on population and sustainable development produced by global scientific panels in 2002 and 2012 37
Wolfgang Lutz

Refereed Articles

Differential mortality from extreme climate events

- Differential mortality patterns from hydro-meteorological disasters: Evidence from cause-of-death data by age and sex 47
Emilio Zagheni, Raya Muttarak and Erich Striessnig

Daily mortality changes in Taiwan in the 1970s: An examination of the relationship between temperature and mortality 71
Zhongwei Zhao, Yuan Zhu and Edward Jow-Ching Tu

Spatial patterns of social vulnerability to weather and climate extremes

Assessing the effectiveness of a social vulnerability index in predicting heterogeneity in the impacts of natural hazards: Case study of the Tropical Storm Washi flood in the Philippines 91
J. Andres F. Ignacio, Grace T. Cruz, Fernando Nardi and Sabine Henry

Social vulnerability to floods in two coastal megacities: New York City and Mumbai 131
Alex de Sherbinin and Guillem Bardy

Differential risk perceptions and climate actions

Who perceives what? A demographic analysis of subjective perception in rural Thailand 167
Jacqueline Meijer-Irons

Who is concerned about and takes action on climate change? Gender and education divides among Thais 193
Raya Muttarak and Thanyaporn Chankrajang

Forecasting future societies' vulnerability and adaptive capacity through the lens of human capital

Future differential vulnerability to natural disasters by level of education . 221
Erich Striessnig and Elke Loichinger

The demography of human development and climate change vulnerability: A projection exercise 241
Jesús Crespo Cuaresma and Wolfgang Lutz

A four-dimensional population module for the analysis of future adaptive capacity in the Phang Nga province of Thailand 263
Elke Loichinger, Samir KC and Wolfgang Lutz